About This Game

NOTE: Apologies. I am abroad and cannot access Steam Community at all at the moment to even read comments. I will be back on the 28th and will do my best to address things then, but you can e-mail me directly at support@radiationburn.net and I may be able to help.

Dead Exit is an undead apocalypse, base management, card game. Ok, it's possibly the only undead apocalypse, based management, card game, but it's fun, and that's the important thing when it comes to games I've been told.

Each player controls a base and tries to out maneuver their opponents and survive the evacuation of a city. Play your cards right. Make alliances. Break alliances. Betray sworn allies at the worst possible time and leave them to get eaten by the hordes. It's up to you how you play it, just make sure you get out of the city with enough resources to survive!

Of course, you don't have to murder everyone in sight. You could play cooperatively and try to make sure everyone gets out alive. Or you can play on your own in solitaire mode which has plenty of settings for a casual quick game or an intense skin of your teeth undead fest. It's really up to you.

Features

- Original card mechanic with multi function, two sided cards. Everything is undead if you aren't careful

WARNING!!!! PLAYING ONLINE DOES NOT WORK YOU CAN NOT PLAY WITH OTHERS ONLINE! DON'T SAY I DIDN'T TELL YOU. Dead Exit is a post-apocalyptic survival card game that tasks you with fending off zombies and gathering resources. It plays quickly, it's fun and the solitaire like single player part of the game is good. Where I imagine this game will shine though is in the multiplayer. It supports up to 8 players and allows each of them to work with others and form alliances to achieve goals cooperatively, or you can play the bad guy and make things more difficult for the other players while stealing resources from them or of course, a mixture of all of the above.

All in all, a fun game and if you have a few friends to play with, you'll have a blast with it. Well worth the modest price.. This, is a good, tactical card game with so many variants. Local, online, co-op, pvp. It's all there, and full of choices to make. If you want super shiny graphics, blood and gore, it isn't here. What IS here is a great card game with solid mechanics, gameplay, and tactics. Well done!. Multiplayer doesn't work don't buy it if you want to play online.. Pretty good game to play especially with friends. The mechanics of the game is also simple to learn but you need strategy to win.

I thoroughly enjoy dead exit. Once you start figuring out how the game works, there are all sorts of fun combos to pull off. On the harder difficulties, you feel like you're constantly just one step ahead of the great zombie hordes, and every move has to matter. I would recommend dead exit, as it is good fun. This game is really fun! The cards complement each other nicely, and I keep finding little 'loops' of cards I can use. The game is simple to understand but there's so many little tricks and tactics that you can use, and the pace can really be ramped up with the 'extra dead' thing - it makes things a lot more hectic. The soundtrack sounds cool but isn't too in-your-face, and the cards look really great. I could definitely see this as a physical card game too; the cards themselves look great and the layout of the boards is really simple and makes sense. Definitely showing this game to my friends!.

- o This looks like my kind of game, so I bought the game for me and gifted it to a friend to play in online multiplayer.
- o Started the game to find out that online multiplayer isn't working.
- o Don't want to own this boardgame anymore if all I can do is solo it (perhaps hotseat works but that is no option to me).
- o Refunded the game for both me and my friend (yes, you can refund a gift!).
- o Even though the game is inexpensive, thank god for Steam refunds!

TO THE DEVELOPER: I don't want to offend, but a game in this state shouldn't be advertised having multiplayer! Even though it is rare, I absolutely hate it when games do this. I would be willing to do port forwarding in my router but without a local LAN option I am not even attempting Hamachi/Tunggle to work around a broken system when other games work more than fine without troubleshooting.. I really like this game. I am a fan of card & board games, yet am tiring of the ccg card games. I'm finding this to be a wonderfully refreshing card game.

At first I thought it to be complicated, but it is actually a very approachable pick up and play game. I like the varying difficult modes in solitaire play as it really helps you to learn the game and incrementally increase the challenge.

At this time, there doesn't seem to be too many players playing the game, which I hope changes because playing with others really changes the dynamic, strategy and fun factor. I could see very fun tournaments and leaderboards some day.

If you are a fan of card games and board games, pick this up. It's a high quality fun game at a great price point. No pay to play here. For one price, you get the entire game.

Really enjoying it. Dead Exit i played now 2.8hrs on it i and i enjoy it. for a card game that really goes quick sure for granted i only played single player and trying to get my friends to play this game and to go on Multiplayer. I'm looking foward for much more down the road and see how things pick up what i think it will.

Time is everything in Dead exit, finding a good plan how to do things and taking the win to make it out alive.

so if you want a zombie post-apocalyptic survival card game this is ione to pick up. Dead Exit is a tactical card game, with zombies.

It can be played single player or multiplayer (online and local).

However you are playing, the basics remain the same. You must defend your base from zombies, trying to stockpile enough resources to escape before you are overrun. You get 3 actions per turn, which may seem like plenty but will soon run out. You can play survivor and vehicle cards inside or outside your base, or even sacrifice them for different results. These cards remain in play (unless killed V stolen V etc) so can be used again and again. For example, you've played a survivor to kill an undead that was outside your base. Want to do the same again next turn? You can but returning the card to your hand before playing it again has used up 2 out of 3 actions for your turn, so you'd better know what you plan to do next. You can use an action to draw a face down card, but doing so will bring a dead along with it. Other cards can be played as one use only action cards, getting to retrieve a card from the trash or revealing a face down card etc.

If all that sounds interesting, remember that is all happening at one base.

Single player could task you with looking after multiple bases at the same time, whilst multiplayer means humans are in charge of other bases, who may or may not have your best interests at heart. Also, events can be triggered throughout the game to drastically change the landscape of the playing field, throwing curveballs into your carefully laid plans.

Suffice to say it can get complicated, but it can be very rewarding when you succeed. Trial and error will inevitably play a part in getting the hang of it, but once you do, you start noticing how combinations of cards complement each other and realising that what at first seemed unfair can be countered.

I've completed the single player game mode 'City Escape' on all the difficulty levels now. Completing the hardest difficulty level on my first attempt at it was genuinely tense and thrilling, something I'll be honest I wasn't expecting to get from a card game. A new single player game mode 'Survival' has just been added to the game, so I'll look forward to playing through that as well.

A downside to the game is that it can be hard to find a match in the multiplayer online mode. I haven't so far - I've played the game with real people locally, but not via the online. But if you've read this far into the review, you can literally help solve that issue! So don't let that put you off, single player and local multiplayer are available.

So yeah, I would recommend. If you're into tactical card games surely it's a must buy. If you are not, well I would still recommend it. It is something different and if you do get into it, then it is rewarding. Plus the fact that it's being sold at a very reasonable price should mitigate the risk if you don't like it.. Dead Exit is a dead end. I didn't pay $5.99 to play a game of solitaire. I didn't pay $5.99 to be made to feel bad. You're meant to die in the tutorial? Seriously? Great game not. I couldn't tell whether I was winning or losing. I wasn't having fun.

I like zombies. I like tactical card games. I hated every minute of this. It's clichéd, stereotypical and overpriced garbage at its finest. It's not worth more than $1.99 and that's being generous. Might as well play Elder Scrolls Legends instead. That's free.

Can't trust user reviews. The more steam continues to burn me the less I'm inclined to spend let alone even bother looking when 38%+ of their entire storefront is made up of indie garbage just like Dead Exit. If it's not fun, who cares about replayability?

My patience for such filth is extremely low. Animation quality is as poor as the tutorial. The entire release reeks of shovelware in a genre that is already overcrowded. Just because I'll play anything with zombies doesn't mean I'm obligated to keep it.

Save your money. Buy six copies of Blood and Bacon instead if you want a zombie fix or download Elder Scrolls Legends for free if you want a decent tactical card game. Avoid this necrotic shill at all costs. Don't walk away from it, run like your life depended on it.

This is only made worse by the simple fact that as of this writing Dead Island Definitive Edition is on sale for $6 while not a great game, it far supersedes Dead Exit in every way and for the same $6 investment you could be having slightly more fun with more friends.

. Accumulate 1 car plus a certain number of sets (person, food, fuel) to escape your city before zombies overrun. Drawn cards give you a zombie unless drawn in special ways. Sometimes event cards give zombies. Idea is to stash away your sets before you are overrun by zombie cards that can fill your 3 outside and 3 inside rows. People and cars can eliminate zombies from your base and also do other things (for example giving you a strategy for drawing cards without also getting a zombie). OK game.
